A Novelty in Gardening Which Affords Rare Pleasure, and a Good Income Besides.

Here is a horticultural curiosity, a strawberry bed containing a hundred plants flourishing in the small compass of an ordinary flour barrel. Next season when you set out your plants and feel that you have not a 150-foot run by two of the principal sources of income for feet wide of garden space to devote to people of nearly all classes. But withstrawberries, just take a copy from the accompanying illustration, from the New York Herald.

THE PEACH ORCHARD.

Soil on Which It Is Located Must Be Neither Too Rich Nor Altogether Poor.

In spite of the disasters experienced by peach growers during the last years, peach orchards are being planted in considerable numbers and on large areas. This is a wise thing helps to average up the lean years and the years when freezes destroy large areas of peach orchards. Gradnally localities are being found in come rarely and where crops of peaches are common.

Soil for peach ordchards may be through severe winters unharmed. In solution of the problem. addition, where there is a hard pan that will hold water, some of the trees will most likely be set in basins that will keep their roots immersed for weeks during the wet weather This often results in the destruction of the tree, as the roots of peach trees must have air as well as water to enable them to grow. The texture of the subsoil has much to do with the success of the peach orchard. It must not be so impervious to water as to hold it for long periods and it must not be so porous as to permit it to leach away too readily. The soil should be loose enough to permit the passage of water, out must be close enough to keep the law of capillary attraction in operation. A good peach soil is neither too rich nor too poor. A too rich soil gives wood growth at the expense of fruit.-Farmers' Re-

Harvesting a Bean Crop. The easiest way to handle a crop of dry shell beans for winter use is to allow the pods to ripen on the plants. If dry, clear weather, pull the plants and allow them to dry on the ground for one or two days. Then store the entire plant in a dry, cool place to be threshed when convenient. Treated in this way the pods do not have to be picked from the plant. The threshed seed is roughly cleaned in a fanning mill and the straw fed to sheep, hogs or cattle. In wet weather or with pole varieties, the pods will have to be gathered by hand as fast as they ripen, and spread thinly in a cool, dry place, so that the beans will not become discolored. -Superintendent E. D. Darlington, Fordhook Seed Farms, Pa.

Hints for Silo Builders. The builder of a silo should deternine to use first-class material only. It will pay him to visit the best silos he can hear of that he may secure information sure to prove valuable to him in the construction of his own silo. Only by the use of good material can he be sure that his silo will be air-tight and will keep his silage from spolling. Good material and good construction increase the life of the silo, which is a very important item, as the silo should be viewed in the light of a permanent improvement. The hoopage should be ample that the silo may be able to withstand the pressure from within .--Farmers' Review.

A NATIONAL PROBLEM.

colution of the Road Question Should Engage the Attention of Our Best Men.

It is claimed by some that the buildng of roads is strictly a local matter, that the benefits are entirely local, and that the whole expense should be borne by the local committees. This is not the view taken by the most progressive countries of Europe. There the building and maintenance of roads is one of the important functions of government. France, Germany and Switzerland are covered by a network of the finest roads in the world. As a result, the western half of Europe is the pleasure ground of the world. The revenue derived from tourists is one out these good roads this revenue could never be secured.

The aim of the people in those countries is to make their grand mountains, their beautiful lakes, their lovely valleys, their castles and monuments easily accessible by means of fine, hard, smooth roads.

What a contrast appears when turn to our own country. We have the finest scenery in the world in the great mountains of the west, but it is practically inaccessible. Except as they get glimpses of it from car windows, the grandeur of our mountains and canyons, and the beauty of our mountain lakes, streams and valleys are a sealed book to the general traveling public. And this will always be the case so long as steep, stony mountain trails are the only means of travel beyond the railway lines. Indeed, much of our finest scenery cannot be reached, even by such trails. If the United States government, in cooperation with the states and local communities, would build great, smooth highways, making the wonders and beauties of our great west easily accessible to tourists, in a few years the ward. Not only would millions of dollars spent annually by Americans in Europe be kept at home, but other shores by tourists from foreign lands.

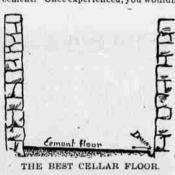

But the natural attractions of our country are not the only things which good roads. Our places of historic is it so little known? Because three miles of about as bad road as can be imagined lie between it and the railway station. One cannot travel over that narrow, steep, rough, muddy country road without a feeling of shame. At present an effort is being made by a small band of patriotic men and women to build what is known as the Jefferson Memorial road, to make Monticello accessible to the public, but only a beginning has been made, and they are finding it up-hill to do, as a big crop now and then work to raise funds to complete the

The oppressiveness was made doubly oppressive by the entrance of a woman in deep mourning.

"I'd think she'd melt under that hot veil," whispered one girl to another.

All eyes centered on the woman of sorrow. The somberness of her garb made the train seem almost sepulchral. But the worst was yet to come. A man, who had been noticed as her companion, had stopped at the cooler to get a drink. The woman quietly arose, stepped into the aisle, and called to the man:

man:

"Felix, don't forget the body. It'd be an swful joke if the train got to Calvary and him not aboard."

Everybody in the car shuddered. Then she turned to a woman sitting behind her and said. "It's my husband. It's the first time I ever had anything to do with this kind of a thing, and it makes me nervous."

Christian Flirting.

The present-day behavior or young people is a continual source of regret to aged travelers. "We used to flirt when I was young. I don't say we didn't." said an old lady, a Sunday or two ago, who was traveling in a suburban train to hear her favorite clergyman preach. "I did it myself, but—" with full consciousness of bygone attractions—"I flirted in a Christian manner, not as girls do now."—Spectator.

For Homeseekers' and Colonies.

The country along the Cotton Belt Route in Southeast Missouri, Arkansas, Northwest Louisiann and Texas offers the greatest opportunities for Homeseekers, Mild climate, good water, cheap building material, abundance of fuel, and soil that will often in a single season yield enough to pay for the ground. Land can be bought as cheap as $2.50 an acre, prairie land at $4 and $5 per acre up, improved or partly cleared land at $10 and $10 per acre up. Some fine propositions for colonies, tracts of 2,000 to 8,000 acres at $4 to $10 per acre—big money in this for a good organizer. Fruit and truck lands in the famous peach and tomato belt of East Texas at $10 to $20 per acre up.
